

To the north is Second Ward, also known as

BROOKLYN

Charlotte's leading African American business and residential district in the early 20th century.

Largely demolished by "urban renewal" in the 1960s.

Physician J.T. Williams, 1898

*Photo Credit: Carolina Room, Charlotte
Mecklenburg Public Library*

A.M.E. Zion Publication House

*Photo Credit: Carolina Room, Charlotte
Mecklenburg Public Library*

S. Brevard Street, Dr. J.T. Williams house left, Grace
A.M.E. Zion Church and M.I.C. office building at right

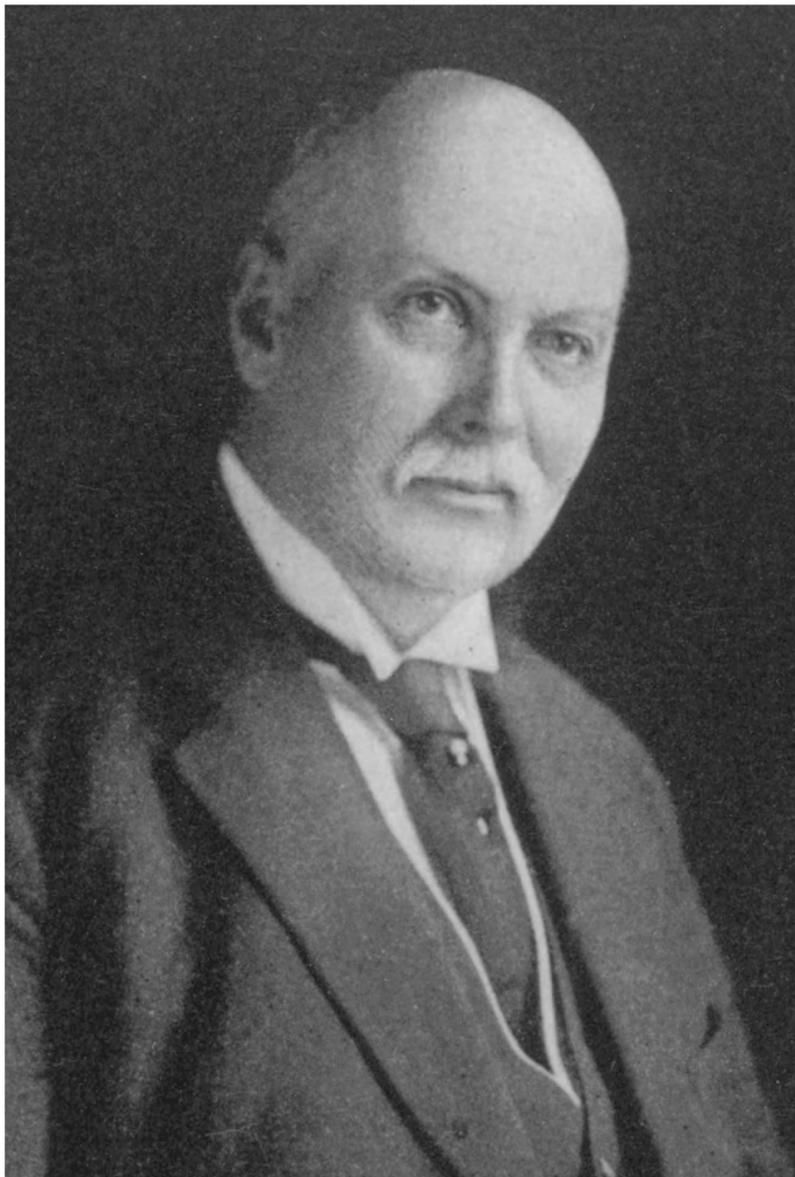

*Photo Credit: Carolina Room, Charlotte
Mecklenburg Public Library*

To the south is the neighborhood of

DILWORTH

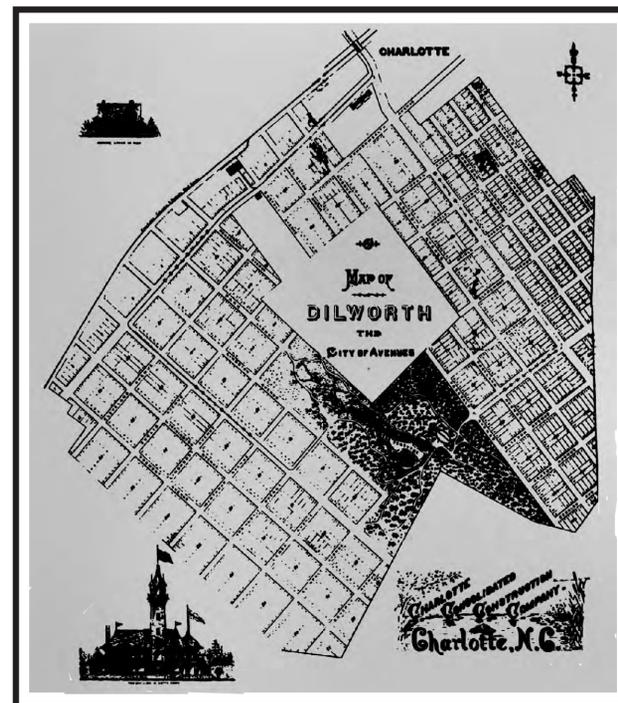

Begun in 1891 as Charlotte's first streetcar suburb.

Expanded in 1911 by the renowned Olmsted Brothers.

Edward Dilworth Latta

Photo Credit: North Carolina Historical Review

Original Proposal for Dilworth, 1891

Photo Credit: Carolina Room,
Charlotte Mecklenburg Public Library

Dilworth & Latta Park Streetcar

Photo Credit: Jim Lockham, Charlotte Trolley