SEPTEMBER 2017 CONSTRUCTION UPDATE

A Unique View of the Blue Line Extension

As CATS gets closer to opening the Blue Line Extension, we invite you to take a tour of the new alignment with two new videos we have created.

In the first, CATS attached a Go Pro camera to the front of a LYNX light rail train during one of the testing phases of the alignment. This way, viewers could get a unique view of their future commute along the rails. The video includes facts about the alignment, including parking spaces and where you can find bus bays. Also keep an eye out for details about the beautiful art associated with the Blue Line Extension! Take a visual tour of the Blue Line Extension and click the image to the right to watch the video! Want to share the video on your own site? Feel free! Here is the YouTube link: <https://youtu.be/w5YiluzFyRg>

The public art associated with the Blue Line Extension is something we at CATS are very proud of. The video below dives deeper into the concept of the art at the Tom Hunter Station, created by public artist, Tom Stanley. Stanley worked with students from Hidden Valley Elementary School to come up with designs for the Tom Hunter Station, and when he had fabricated his work, invited the students (now in high school!) to witness their work first hand. Click below to watch this touching story and fall in love with the Tom Hunter Station art. A special shout out to Basic Cable Productions, who compiled and made this video.
